

The Australian Government's Small Business Superannuation Clearing House (The Clearing House) will soon be operational through Medicare Australia. Registration for the clearing house service has now commenced and the full clearing house service will be available from 1st July, 2010.

Any Small business with less than 20 staff can register to use the free clearing house if they choose.

Registered small business can pay their employees' superannuation into a single location in one simple electronic transaction. The Clearing House will then send the contributions to the nominated superannuation funds.

For small businesses, the convenience of making one easy payment means they can meet their superannuation guarantee obligations and save on time and paperwork. A built-in reporting function means they can access a record of their contribution history whenever it's needed.
